- 2. In the spring of 1952 Abdul Karin Makhdum was in disgrace and under house arrest in Kashgar. The townspeople were demanding that he be tried publicly on the charges of being a landlord and of oppressing his tenants under the Kuomin tang regime. Abdul Karin Mahkdum had at one time been to Moscow, where he had been granted a personal audience with Stalin. He had been a pre-Soviet Governor of Kashgar since the time of SHENG Shih-t'sai and had supported the Chinese Communist army when it toek Sinkiang.
- Detachments of the Ili army⁶ were stationed at Kashgar, Ak'osu (80-15, 41-09), and Khotan during the spring of 1952. Their uniforms differed from those of the Chinese Communist army.⁷
- 4. In the spring of 1952 the enthusiasm of the Sinkiang Communists for the Communists from China had slackened --- the latter, though Communists, being regarded as outsiders. The Chinese were beginning to try to get rid of persons expressing this attitude.
